Pedagogy

The prime objective of scholarly development of the students is to nurture in them the spirit of exploration and enquiry. For young children, opportunities are available to observe, handle a variety of natural and man-made materials and hone their inherent virtues of inquisitiveness, sharing and caring. The students are regularly encouraged to research elementary and complex levels. For this purpose, the school infrastructure and curriculum enable them to use school laboratories, library and activity rooms. The time-table each week provides adequate time and space to the students and the teachers to read, collect data, construct, discuss, analyse and share their findings regularly. These activities give them a splendid opportunity to develop scientific attitude and temperament.

The House system is a unique approach to inculcate the quality of leadership among the students and offers them an opportunity to learn the skills which are highly required for their survival in the world of the competitions. By appointing the students to various positions in the house, they are given the chance to develop a sense of responsibility. The House Captains hone their leadership skills in the role, managing not only their peers but learning how to 'manage' the team.

The House system is first and foremost inclusion of all learning types and interests. House membership provides the students with the opportunity to enter into competitions of their interest with their peers. It can have numerous academic as well as the social-emotional benefits. Those who feel comfortable and supported enough to participate in House events are more likely to feel able to commit themselves fully to academia.

To ensure a healthy and constructive sense of competition among children, the school has been divided into four houses. They are as follow:
